Monticello city sets secondary water rate, free landfill visit in May

by David Boyle News Director

Monticello City Council members set the secondary water rate, and set up a free dump for residents at the city landfill as part of the latest meeting.

Members of the Monticello City Council received a report on water including the city staff recommendation to set the conservation rate for secondary water usage at the April 9 meeting.

Monticello runs a four-tier system allowing the town to charge different rates for secondary water, depending on drought conditions. The different tiers are designed to encourage conservation during times of drought.

After another good winter, the city of Monticello is in the tier-one conservation rate. While the city council selected the data-backed staff-recommended green color-coded tier-one rate, Monticello city does encourage conservation of water.

Council also received word that the secondary water system would be charged on April 15. Public Works Director Nathan Langston shared the report, it was also shared that Langston will be resigning from his position effective April 30. City Manager Kaeden Kulow said the departure may lead to restructuring of the Public Works department, and that Langston has agreed to help the city in the transition. Kulow shared his thanks and that the city is sad to see him go. Members of the Monticello City Council also discussed a free dump day at the city landfill, approving a one load dump for city accounts upcoming in May. Kulow reported information from last year's event which saw 107 visits from 735 eligible accounts between May 15 and June 14. The event was held later in 2023 due to the late winter snow. Of those 107 visits in 2023, 61 accounts visited once, while 23 accounts had two visits. 642 cubic yards of waste was collected, with an estimated transfer cost of a little more than $2,000 for the event.

event. Kulow clarified that while the city landfill operates at a small loss, the rest of sanitation including the garbage route make up for any losses.

"Overall the landfill and garbage route combined come out to a net positive every year. It's constantly producing money it needs to run itself, and puts towards a new garbage truck."

Still some members of the council hoped to close that gap. As a result the city council approved one free dump for city residents, rather than the two free dumps that have been done previously. In addition the city will allow the free dumps for accounts that were active as of April 9, with an exception for new move-in and home purchases with proof.

Monticello City Council met twice last week, with a second meeting occurring on April 12. The special meeting was to revoke the Monticello City business license of Sage Stay. a company operating a short-term rental in the city. The action followed the state of Utah which revoked the license after failing to pay sales tax and transient room tax on the business. The state began attempting to contact the party in April of 2023, and never did hear from the business before ultimately revoking the license in January 2024. City Recorder Melissa Gill The company then applied for a Monticello business license in March 2024 which was approved. Afterward the state made the city aware of the issue. At a public hearing members of the council unanimously approved the revocation of the license.

Blanding sets policies for solar, event sponsorship

by David Boyle News Director

Members of the Blanding city council touched on a variety of topics at their latest meeting including updating policies related to solar power and event sponsorship as well as approving a bid for the shade structure at the city ball fields at their latest meeting.

Members of the Blanding City Council approved a contract bid for the creation of a shade structure at the Centennial Park ballfields at the April 9 meeting.

The city was awarded a Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) last April for the project and has been working towards completing the project since. With the city selecting a contract, that same contract now goes to be reviewed by CDBG, with that group's approval leading to work beginning on the project.

Members of the Blanding City Council also approved a change to the city council event sponsorships. Members of the council approved changes, while the policy previously only allowed residents to ask for city sponsorship during a short time during the start of the year, the new policy allows event organizers to ask for sponsorship throughout the year. The updated policy also removed a requirement that event proceeds of city-sponsored events go to nonprofit organizations.

Members of the Blanding City Council also canceled their next meeting scheduled for April 23. The city council canceled the meeting to avoid a conflict with the Bears Ears National Monument Draft Plan Open House scheduled for April 23 from 6:00 to 8:00 pm at USU Blanding campus. Another open house meeting will be held at Monument Valley High on May 16. Blanding City Council also brought up the city plans to provide workshops for how to provide effective comments on the draft plan. Those workshops are scheduled for April 24, May 15 and June 5. With workshops occurring from Noon to 1:00 pm on those days and from 5:00 pm to 6:00 pm as well.

Members of the Blanding City Council also approved policies related to solar power.

According to the passed resolutions, the policies were developed to "streamline the permitting process, ensure fair and equitable net metering agreements, and provide clarity on program participation for solar PV system owners"

The Solar Photovoltaic (PV) system permitting guidelines, net metering service agreement and net metering program description policies were crafted with the aid of West Coast Consultants, as the company has extensive experience in creating policies regarding solar power.

Members of the Blanding City Council also approved a change order to a city street project to address a storm drain issue recently discovered. Herring explained that the change order will allow crews from LeGrand Johnson Construction who are already mobilized on a streets project, to address a storm drain issue. The estimated cost for the repair is just shy of $90,000 with the cost covered from the city storm drain account. The repair will draw less than 10-percent of that particular account.

At the meeting members of the Blanding City Council also approved the appointment of Steve Hiatt to serve as the Blanding representative on the Public Health board. Mayor Logan Monson explained that he had previously served on the board, with Blanding last represented by Herring, after taking the position as city manager the council was looking to fill the board position. Monson proposed Hiatt, who works as a behavioral health counselor for Utah Navajo Health System take the role, members of the council unanimously approved the appointment.

Members of the Blanding City Council also approved a privacy policy statement. As required by the state the policy will give clear direction for how the city collects, uses, and protects the personal information of citizens.

Members of the council had a discussion about the costs of the

Make plans to attend a rally on May 4th in support of continued motorized travel in Arch Canyon. We will meet in the morning at multiple staging areas in Monticello. We will ride to the BLM and Forest Service offices for a short program and then gather at a different location for lunch. A more detailed itinerary is available on the SPEAR website (spear4all.com)

BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The BLM and Forest Service have released the draft management plan for the Bears Ears National Monument. The draft outlines 5 proposed management alternatives, including a preferred alternative that mandates closure of Arch Canyon to all motorized travel. SPEAR is a local organization that advocates for public access to public land. Enjoying the beautiful scenery and fascinating sights in the canyon is a long-standing tradition enjoyed by multiple generations of local residents and visitors. Our hope is that this experience continues to be available to our children, grandchildren, and others with limited mobility.

ATTEND PUBLIC OPEN MEETINGS

The federal agencies will be holding 5 in-person and 2 virtual public meetings to answer questions about the management plan. If you live in San Juan County you could consider attending the meeting in Blanding on April 23rd. It will be held at USU Blanding from 6 to 8 pm. For more detailed information about the public meetings please visit spear4all.com.

Dallyn Bayles in Concert

By Sally Jack Contributing writer

San Juan County residents are in for a treat April 19 when Broadway touring veteran Dallyn Vail Bayles presents his production, Anthem of Hope: An Evening of Broadway.

The concert will be held Friday, April 19 at 7 p.m. at the San Juan High School auditorium in Blanding. The concert is sponsored by Kigalia Fine Arts and features songs from Les Miserable, Phantom of the Opera, Man of La Mancha, South Pacific, The Sound of Music, and many others.

Dallyn will be accompanied by professional musician and composer, Roth Boothe, on the piano.

A professional actor, singer, recording artist, and teacher, Dallyn is an accomplished artist with a beautiful tenor voice and an impressive repertoire of performances in theater, film, and as a concert soloist.

Perhaps what San Juan County residents will love best about Dallyn Bayles is that he is a small town boy with local roots.

His father, Kelly Bayles, grew up in Blanding and graduated from San Juan High School.

Dallyn's parents, Kelly and Vicki, established, owned, and operated The Tamarisk Restaurant in Green River, UT, where Dallyn was raised.

Dallyn's grandparents, Grant and Helen Bayles, were also Blanding-ites for many years.

As a descendant of Hole-in-the-Rock pioneers, Dallyn's roots go deep into the red earth of San Juan County.

"I honor and respect the heritage I have," he relates. "I am the third great-grandson of early San Juan pioneers Jens and Kirsten Nielson, and Platte De Alton and Adelia Robison Lyman; and the second great-grandson of John E. and Margaret C. Nielson Adams; and Ole Hanson Bayles and Evelyn Lyman Bayles."

And, he adds with a smile, "I know the meaning of the word sticky-ta-to-ity! I love to come back here, to be in a place that is very special to me, and to share my talents with the people of this community."

"Sticky-ta-to-ity" is a phrase coined by Dallyn's grandfather Jens Nielson, meaning "stick to it!" a phrase he often used to encourage himself and other pioneers to keep going when the going got tough.

Bayles graduated from Brigham Young University with a Bachelor in Fine Arts in Music Dance Theatre and completed a Masters degree in Musical Theatre at The Boston Conservatory.

He has performed in theaters across the country including Hale Center Theater, Beckett Theater in New York City, The Eccles Theater, Tuacahn, and Carnegie Hall.

As an actor he has delighted audiences in a variety of roles: Phantom, Raoul and Andre in The Phantom of the Opera; Captain von Trapp in The Sound of Music; King Triton in The Little Mermaid; Rochester in Jane Eyre; Emile de Becque in South Pacific: John Wilkes Booth in Assassins, Chauvelin in The Scarlet Pimpernel: the Beast in Disney's When you Wish, and Godfrey Cass in the world premiere production of The Weaver of Raveloe, to name a few.

On film, Dallyn portrays Brigham Young in Green Flake, and Hyrum Smith in both Joseph Smith: The Prophet of the Restoration, and Emma Smith: My Story.

His recordings are featured in the films 17 Miracles and Ephraim's Rescue.

Dallyn has been featured as a guest soloist with the Tabernacle Choir, Music and the Spoken Word, the Utah Symphony, and Emmy Award winning and Grammy-nominated composer Kurt Bestor.

Spiraling through time

The first time I felt the tug of a spiral was in the late 1970s, when I was still in college.

The object of my attention was the Spiral Jetty, a land art installation designed and built by American sculptor Robert Smithson.

Completed almost 55 years ago, the Jetty, located on the northeastern shore of the Great Salt Lake, is built of mud, salt crystals, and basalt rock. Its spiral fascinated me, and I remember feeling there was something deep, visceral, almost magical about it.

Not long after my introduction to the Spiral Jetty, I was walking through a regional mall in Farmington, NM back when malls were a thing.

In the central foyer, with clothing stores and candy shops all around, I stumbled onto a Spiral Wishing Well, which was a fundraising project for a local charity.

As I stood looking on, people dropped their coins in a slot, and the pennies, nickels, dimes, and quarters circled round and I discovered the Spiral Jetty and Spiral Wishing Wells, I was working hard to sell a ceremonial basket to an older Navajo woman. She

S h e pointed out the spiral format in Navajo coiled basketry and told me this story: "The basket is viewed as a map through which Navajo people chart their lives. The central spot in the basket represents the entry, birth, where Navajo people emerged into this, the Glittering World.

"When the people arrived, all was pure. The inner coils of the basket are white to represent this lightness, a new beginning. As one travels outward on the coils, he or she begins to encounter more and more black. This represents struggle and pain, the darker side of life.

As you make your way through the darkness you eventually reach the red bands, the blood rings, which speak of marriage, mixing your blood with the blood of your spouse, and the creation of family.

During this time there is no darkness, round, ultimately dropping through a hole in the bottom of the well.

I was once again captivated, and at the first opportunity began inserting my own coins, which continued until my financial resources were fully exhausted.

It was then I recognized just how captivating spirals can be and how essential they are in our everyday lives.

After returning to Bluff in the late 1980s, I discovered spirals in numerous rock art panels located throughout the Desert Southwest. Many anthropologists and archaeologists argue spirals are universal symbols that speak to some profound, almost primal emotion in us.

These individuals say spirals are the oldest imagery found in spiritual ceremonies and that they represent migration, a journey, and the many changes occurring as life evolves.

Others point out that spirals represent a goddess, the womb, fertility, and life-force energy. They are found in human and animal physiology, plant-life, minerals, cosmic formations, and even weather patterns.

These people agree spirals are sacred symbols representing life's ever-changing quest for meaning.

Not long after Twin Rocks Trading Post opened, and years after the red is pure, clean.

Progressing out of the familial bands one encounters more darkness. This, however, is interspersed with white light, which represents increasing enlightenment, knowledge, wisdom.

This expands until one enters the all white banding of the outer rim, which is the spirit world, where there is no darkness.

The straight line from the center of the basket to the outer rim is the spirit-line and is there to remind us that no matter how much darkness one encounters in the world, there is always a pathway to the light."

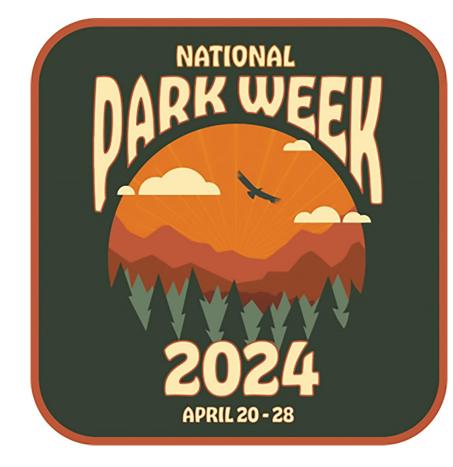

As Smithson is known to have said, "Nature does not proceed in a straight line, it moves in spirals."

Those patterns determine fertility, our lifeforce, spiritual ceremonies, migration, and our pathways.

Smithson is also known for saying, "The journey is as important as the destination."

The Jetty, spiral petroglyphs, and even the Spiral Wishing Well remind us that we are all hurtling through our personal adventures in an ever-evolving, often chaotic, and ultimately rhythmic flow.

Enjoy the ride, you never know when your coin will drop, sending you out the spirit-line and into your final coil.

Blanding's Forgotten History

NOTES FROM 🍊 WESTWATER

by Merry Palmer

Aiyanna walked into the Blanding Trading Post, clutching the one-dollar trading token in her hand. Earlier that week she'd sold a blanket to the trader. He had examined it carefully, pleased with its beauty, symmetry, and durability, and he understood the spirit pathway she'd woven into the border, so her spirit intertwined in the blanket could escape. Then, they had bartered for the things she needed most: Flour, baking powder, coffee, and canned tomatoes. He also gave her the token to redeem later.

Now, two men wearbroad-brimmed ing hats stood at the back counter, joking with the trader, giving Aiyanna a chance to look around. A potbellied stove stood in the middle of the store along with barrels filled with beans. Three long, high counters ran along the back and sides of the post. Pots, tubs, ropes, bridles, and hats hung from the ceiling. Bolts of colorful cloth, scarves, and hard tack candy lined the top of one counter. A glass case filled with jewelry sat on the opposite one, and the trader had shelved canned goods, bags of Blue Bird flour, boots, tools, tobacco, and cigarette paper behind the back counter. What Aiyanna wanted was a new coffee pot and a scarf to protect her hair from the wild spring wind. She spent some time deliberating and finally picked a pot that seemed practical and a scarf with bright, beautiful colors. The men greeted her as she walked up to the counter and teased her about her purchases as the trader punched her token, returned it to her, and carefully counted out a few smaller tokens for her to spend later.

The above scene is, of course, fictional, but it's based on traditional trading post practices. In addition to bartering and pawning, traders created tokens out of aluminum, tin, or brass as a way to buy and sell goods. They embossed the tokens with the specific name of the trading post, or if the trader op- a silver dollar, was enerated more than one cased in hard plastic post, with the trader's with information across name.

when Robert and Valarie Turk gave us one as a gift. The Turks are educators at Blanding Elementary. Valarie is a preschool teacher, especially gifted at helping at-risk students gain a solid foundation for future schooling, and Robert is a fifth grade rockstar. He's also a historian. An expert in the Civil War, the World Wars, and the Long Walk, he's taken his fifth grade classes on field trips in Westwater, reenacting the forced march to Fort Sumner in the 1860s, complete with soldiers mounted on horses. Because of his many efforts in and out of the classroom, history has come alive for countless students.

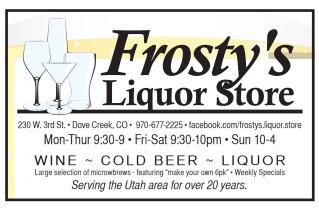

After Robert gave Ted the token at Christmas, I peered at it, and part of Blanding's forgotten history also began coming alive for us. On the front of the token, we read, "Blanding Trading Post * Blanding, Utah." On the back, "Good for $1.00 in Trade." The brass token, about the size of the top, reading, "No Our interest in tokens Date/ PCGS Genuine/ age-AU Detail."

Although not much is known about the Blanding Trading Post, it was located on Main Street in a two-story, log-fronted building where the Ice Cream Parlor on the first floor and Cyber Native Designs LLC on the second are located now. The Powell brothers. Junius Lawrence (June) and Claude, operated it probably in the 1930's and 40's. We don't know if they constructed the building, but trading post businesses ran in their family. LaVerne Tate, June's daughter, wrote in her book, Images of America: Early San Juan County, that her granddad, Reuben Eugene (Gene) Powell, worked in Tuba City where June was born and spoke fluent Navajo. Later, in 1907, he was farming outside of Cortez, Colorado, when a Bluff freighter was killed nearby. After he took the man's body back to Bluff, the residents told him they needed another freighter, so in 1908 he, his wife, Ida May Foutz, and their children moved to Bluff. He freighted for a year and then worked at the Frank Hyde Trading Post. His wife, May, served as the town's midwife even though they eventually had eleven children, three of which died young. Later still. Gene became a San Juan County Deputy Sheriff, and Claude took over running the Frank Hyde Trading Post after the owner moved. In 1943, June built the Powell Trading Post in Bluff and operated it until 1957 when he retired. No doubt, those trading posts also furnished tokens.

Over the years, it's estimated that 40 to 50 trading posts issued tokens. Although the U.S. government outlawed their use in the 1930s when U.S. currency became more available, some tokens stayed in circulation until the 50s. Eventually, the Navajo Nation government encouraged Native-run businesses on the reservation, and the number of trading posts dwindled from a peak of more than 100 to 35 in 1970 to even fewer now.

The Blanding Trading Post tokens are tangible evidence of forgotten local history, and as Ted held ours, it connected us to a time when purchasing practices were much different than the plastic cards and Amazon shopping of today-when a trader understood the value and beauty of a handwoven blanket as well as its "spirit line," and when its trade earned the artist coffee pots, flour, canned goods, and beautiful scarves.

If anyone has more information about the Blanding Trading Post or its tokens, we'd love to hear from you. Please contact palmermerry@ yahoo.com

A Monumental Effort: Tribes and Federal Agencies Collaborate to Protect Bears Ears

Dear Editor:

Protecting the Bears Ears National Monument (BENM) is not just an environmental issue; for the Ute people this landscape is a vital aspect of our cultural, historical, and spiritual identity. Bears Ears is a sacred place where the past is always present, and we can still hear the voices of our ancestors in every canyon and on every mesa top.

The prominence of Bears Ears is not limited to the extraordinary landscape. The BENM is the first national monument to be established at the request of five Tribal Nations, the first to have a collaborative management mandate codified into federal law, and the first time a coalition of Tribes collaborated with two federal agencies on a draft Resource Management Plan (RMP) for any public lands or waters.

The Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, the Ute Indian Tribe, the Navajo Nation, the Zuni Tribe, and the Hopi Tribe make up the Bears Ears Commission (BEC) and we have been working in collaboration with our federal partners to incorporate our Traditional Indigenous Knowledge to ensure sustainable resource management for the Monument.

The March 8, 2024 draft RMP for Bears Ears includes aspects of our knowledge and expertise, and Alternative E is most consistent with Tribal values and recommendations.

Join members of the BEC, along with the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service, at the upcoming in-person meeting in Blanding to learn more about our proposal for the management of the BENM. We invite you to learn about and support the Commission's preferred alternative, Alternative E.

Our ancestral lands stretch far beyond the current boundaries of the BENM, and, prior to disruption by non-Native settlement, the Utes followed a seasonal cycle throughout this entire region. All aspects of Ute life took place on these lands including hunting, farming, raising livestock, gathering wild plants for food and medicine, firewood gathering, and burial of the dead.

Bears Ears is a physical and spiritual map of Ute history and cosmology, where landmarks embody stories, songs, and ceremonies, defining our identity and worldview. This landscape has sustained us physically and spiritually for centuries.

Collaborative management of the BENM recognizes Ute sovereignty and our right to protect our cultural heritage. Protecting this place ensures that future generations can walk in the footsteps of our ancestors, learn from the land and its stories, and continue traditions that have been passed down through generations.

In preserving Bears Ears, we protect not just a monument, but a living cultural landscape, a museum of human history, and a sacred place that embodies the spiritual heritage of the Ute people. We must listen to the voices of those who have been the stewards of this land for centuries and we invite you to support our efforts to protect it.

The second in-person public comment meeting will be held in Blanding on Tuesday, April 23, 2024, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. MDT. The meeting will be at Utah State University Blanding, 576 West 200 South, Blanding, UT 84511.

Palmer Brothers Build To Last

by Janet Wilcox Contributing writer

Terry Palmer was 10 years old when he and his 9-year-old brother, Taylor, were hired by their father to clean the Mining Supply Store in Blanding.

During the Uranium boom in San Juan County (late 1940's -50's) miners needed supplies which Van Palmer's store provided.

"Taylor and I moved so many things in and out of that building. We used a conveyor belt and marked boxes with different colors of tape to keep orders straight," Terry recalled.

"We'd load and unload boxes of dynamite boxes which gave us headaches." Terry recalled.

This early work ethnic and training motivated both boys to begin their own building companies.

Taylor began his 1973. His specialty was cabinets and finishing work.

Terry started his company (Palmer Builders) in 1976. All the Palmer siblings learned to work by painting propane tanks, hauling rocks and cleaning the Patio every day it was open.

"We worked as a family and I gained confidence" Terry recalled. "I liked working with Mom and Dad. Even though Dad was thorough, he had good rapport with all of us. He was a good employer."

Terry earned his accounting degree from Brigham Young University in the early 1970's. His business training and construction skills kept him employed all his life.

His first project was building another "Patio" in Springville when he was single. He met his wife Camie there in the early 1980's. He and his family then moved back to Blanding Builders.

His company's first project was buying the land where the old CCC camp was and they built 15 homes.

First time owners were able to secure low interest loans through Farmers Home in San Juan County and as a result Palmer Builders had plenty of work.

Most of the starter homes were 1,100 sq. foot with three bedrooms. "Farmers Loan wouldn't finance larger homes;" he explained.

They also built the Sandy and Boyd Laws home and homes for both Doris and Dennis Guymon south of town, as well as the Tony Turk home.

"Most of the homes had basements, so it was a learning experience!," he explained. "We even poured cement for Hurst Builders. Scott was really a good man to work with."

Unfortunately, Farm Home Loans dried up and he started Palmer and this forced changes in his business.

Taylor returned to Blanding in 1970 after serving a mission in Scotland. Then he went to a trade tech school in Provo to earn his contractor's license.

He married Jenice in 1971, then moved back to Blanding where he started working with Jim Slavens, as well as his father.

For many years Taylor did commercial work for schools, hospitals and other large businesses in San Juan County, putting in cabinets, staircases and counters.

In 1980, Terry began working for other construction businesses. For over 20 years, he built multi-million-dollar commercial projects in southern Utah.

His accounting degree from BYU played an important part in his success completing high-quality projects. He was eventually hired as an accountant-estimator for Blackburn and Associates in the mid-1980's, working on commercial projects.

Terry's most challenging project was constructing the fire station in Emery County for the Water Conservancy District in St. George. They had to float the equipment and supplies on pontoons. A previous company lost a whole caterpillar once in the process.

Another major challenge was a project for St. George on the west bluff. They dynamited the rock out first, then drillers inserted heat pump coils into the ground. The pumps worked like a refrigerator, but in reverse. They also built one motel in St. George, doing their work at night because of the heat.

Besides extreme heat, St. George had other building challenges. The soil often had blue clay in it, which had to be removed. (It is much like the kalachi clay which caused problems for the Blanding Stake Center.)

A vein of clay swells when damp and will break the foundation. They put 18-foot columns into the ground to make sure it would be stable.

In 2005- '06 Palmer Construction built Marriott Motels and the large Best Western Motel in Bryce Canyon -the biggest one in their chain. They also built a large barn for entertainment at Ruby's Inn.

"We worked there for about a year. They were great to work for," Terry stated.

Velocity Construction was the biggest construction company in southern Utah and Terry was a partner in the company.

Velocity also did the DFCN State Construction projects, as well as building projects for Dixie and USU, motels and other office buildings.

Palmer worked with Velocity with a large crew of men for seven years. "We completed about 40 projects. However, when financing dropped in 2008, construction was dramatically affected."

At that time, Terry retired and his family moved back to Utah Valley in 2010. He still works part time as an estimator in Orem for Broderick and Hen son and hasn't slowed down much. He built a home for their daughter and recently renovated an apartment for Karly and Scott Jeppson in Blanding.

Taylor and his family did the mammoth job of building cabinets and doing finishing work for Allen and Cathy Lund, who built a huge lodge and homes in Long Canyon. They did the trim work, cabinets, staircases, furniture, cabinets, beds etc.

Janice researched and drew the art used in the homes. The property was originally settled and farmed by their ancestor, William Zimira Palmer and his wife Rebecca Stevens.

Their original home is still standing in Long Canyon as a tribute to their hard work and contribution to San Juan County.

Jenice and Taylor worked together to build their own home, which includes her "inspiration loft" where she writes and studies. She can see forever in all four directions!

Their home is unique in many ways. It is the only one Taylor built using walnut for cabinets as well as a fancy carved table for the Lund family.

A great sadness occurred in July, 2019 when Taylor died from cancer. But his legacy lives on.

All three sons have the skills needed to keep TaylorMade successful and serving the Four Corners area.

They and their families continue to keep quality carpentry and construction alive.

Three meets in, Bronco boys tennis team gets set for big Vernal trip

by Rhett Sifford Sports Editor

The San Juan High School boys tennis team has battled hard in their first three meets of the season. The team is still looking for their first win but they are improving steadily and did win two matches in their most recent meet with Gunnison on Thursday, April 11.

The first doubles team of Boston Bowers and Wyatt Keith defeated Gunnison's Hunter Goble and Sawyer Christiansen 6-1 and 6-1.

In the second doubles match Sawyer Tomco and Oren Bradford took down Grady Anderson and A.J. Roberts 6-0 and 6-0. Unfortunately the doubles wins couldn't overcome three losses in the singles matches and the Broncos lost the meet 3-2

In the first meet of the season in Moab April 3 Grand County defeated San Juan 5-0. South Sevier beat the Broncos 5-0 in the other meet that took place in Blanding this past Thursday.

San Juan Head Coach Casey Olsen, who is now in just his second year at the helm, says it has been truly remarkable to see the improvement in many of his players since last season.

"We started practicing in early March," he stated, "and have been seeing a lot of progress in our boys. Michelle Bradford is my assistant coach this year.

"She has experience playing tennis and helps coach the girls team. She has made a huge difference for us, teaching new skills and practices that are paying off with our players.

"We have Denim Howell, Noah Olsen, and Spencer Gosney playing singles this season. Evan and Wyatt Keith, Boston Bowers, Oren Bradford, Sawyer Tomco, and Max Russell are playing doubles.

"We have several freshmen and they have improved a lot since we started. The returning players have improved greatly since last year."

The Broncos are back on the court with a weekend trip this Friday and Saturday, April 19-20 to play in the Uintah Invitational in Vernal, UT.

Six of the top eight runners in the boys 100 meter hail from the county and it was a very tight race with all the point scorers finishing within a second of each other.

Jagger Nieves won the event with an 11.45 while Bronco teammate Zack Conway was just a fraction of a second behind with an 11.58. Monticello's Tavon Black was third with an 11.60.

Bronco Josiah LaPalmer came across fifth with a time of 11.96. Lynnox Benn of San Juan and Monticello's Soren Welch Grand County's Aiden Gordon won the boys 200 meter, but San Juan and Monticello runners dominated from there, filling out the remaining seven scoring positions.

DARWIN "PA" J BERGEMAN

January 7, 1939 ~ April 9, 2024

Darwin "Pa" J Bergeman was a caring husband, father, grandfather, brother, and friend. He left this world suddenly on April 9, 2024 at the age of 85.

Darwin was born to Fay Loveless on January 7, 1939 in Provo, UT. Darwin married Sharon Bergeman in 1966 and they were sealed in the temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in 1972. Darwin lovingly embraced Sharon's three children, Joyce, Jay, and Tim, as his own. Later they had a son together, Justin.

Pa had a zest for life that was contagious. Whether he was out hunting in the great outdoors, meticulously reloading bullets, or crafting his signature homemade Kahlua and famous chip dip, he did it all with passion and skill. His quick wit and endless supply of jokes brightened everyone's day and his pockets were never without a stash of lifesaver mints to share. He found solace in watching old Western movies and talking about the good ol' days.

A public viewing and funeral was held on Monday, April 15 at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Blanding.

In lieu of flowers, you are welcome to donate to funeral costs by contacting Jessica Roueche at jbergeman12@gmail. com

BENETI BELL SCHAUGAARD

January 3, 1940 ~ April 10, 2024

Beneti Bell Schaugaard, a cherished wife, mother, and grandmother, was reunited with many loved ones on the other side of the veil on April 10, 2024, after a courageous battle with cancer.

Born on January 3, 1940, in Salina, UT, to Merrill and Geneta Bell, both of whom preceded her in death, Beneti's life was a tapestry of love, service, and creativity.

Beneti's early years were spent in the small farming community of Greenwich, UT, where she developed strong values of integrity and hard work that would define her life.

She had to take a bus to Richfield for school starting in 10th grade and graduated top of her class, excelling in math and bookkeeping.

Beneti married Gaylen Schaugaard, her school sweetheart whom she had known for as long as she could remember, and were sealed in the Manti temple.

Together, they wove a life filled with love and happiness. They were blessed with a beautiful family, including their sons, Craig (Rebecca) and David (Dixie), and daughters, Lei-Ann (Matthew) Shepherd and Jodi (Kendall)

this Allin

Turner.

Her legacy further blossomed with 21 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren, with four more on the way. Sadly, she is preceded in death by one grandson.

Beneti worked in the school lunch program at Monticello High School and Monticello Elementary School, where she rose to the role of lunchroom manager.

Known for her warmth and kindness, she formed lasting bonds with the women she worked with and loved getting to know the countless children who passed through her line daily.

An exceptional seamstress and quilter, Beneti's hands were rarely still. She made beautiful quilts, which won grand prize ribbons at the county fair. Her children and grandchildren cherish the handmade quilts that she made for each of them.

She also enjoyed crocheting, knitting, and sewing. She designed and sewed her daughters' wedding dresses, blessing dresses for her granddaughters, and little tuxedos for her grandsons.

Her culinary skills were equally renowned, with her sweet rolls, dinner rolls, and kolaches becoming the stuff of family legend. Her kitchen was a place of gathering, where the aroma of her cooking was a prelude to the joy of togetherness.

Beneti's devotion to her faith was unwavering. She served in many callings in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints throughout her life. Her first calling after moving to Monticello was the YW camp director. She also served in the Primary, Relief Society, and Scouts. Later, she served with Gaylen as the camp host at Camp Blue Mountain.

She found joy and purpose in her service at the Monticello, Utah Temple, where she dedicated ten years of her life. Her commitment to her faith was an inspiration to many, and she was deeply disappointed when she had to step away from her temple duties due to health problems.

The words loving, kind, and generous only begin to describe Beneti. She embodied these virtues in every aspect of her life, from how she raised her family to her interactions with friends and strangers.

Her kindness was a gentle force that uplifted those around her, and her generosity knew no bounds.

Beneti is survived by her adoring husband Gaylen; her loving children and their spouses; siblings Merilyn Hugentober, Verl Bell, Janet Gleave, and Susan Bender; and a lineage of grandchildren and great-grandchildren who will carry her spirit forward. As we bid farewell to Beneti Bell Schaugaard, we celebrate a life rich in love and service. Her memory will be cherished, and her presence sorely missed. The warmth of her spirit will continue to embrace us, much like the quilts she crafted with such care.

Beneti's life was a beautiful patchwork of moments and memories stitched together by the love she gave and the love she received. May she rest in peace in the knowledge that her legacy will endure in the hearts of all who knew her.

The family would like to thank the staff at Zion's Way Home Health and Hospice for the loving care given to Beneti in the last months of her life. They also want to thank the Monticello 4th Ward and the community of Monticello for their compassion and service.

Funeral services will be held at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Monticello North Chapel, Friday April 19, beginning at 2 p.m. with a viewing before starting at 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The funeral services can be viewed at https://streamutah.live/funerals.

House9Foundation in Tonga is a shelter for abused and neglected young women. It's a place where a difference is being made in the lives of a few. Courtesy photo

Throwing the starfish back in Tonga

In 1969 Loren Eiseley wrote: A man was walking along \mathbf{the} beach when he noticed a boy picking up starfish and gently throwing them into the ocean. Approaching the boy he asked, "Young man, what are you doing?"

"Throwstarfish ing back into the ocean. The tide is going out. If I don't throw them back, they'll die," the boy replied.

The man laughed and said. "Do vou realize there are thousands of starfish washed up on this shore? You can't possibly make any difference."

After listening politely, the boy bent down to that one."

House9Foundation is a shelter for abused and neglected young women in Tonga. It is run by a couple that have day jobs as teachers but after school they are superheroes.

They are two of the humblest unassum ing people I have met. They opened their door to abused girls nearly ten years ago when they noticed students that started missing school, had become withdrawn, or had bruises or cut marks on their skin.

Often the kids had nowhere to go, or just needed shelter, food, or a place to sleep that of kids that needed help.

I am talking with several of the young women they have helped. They each tell their heartbreaking story. I can see the nervous twitching of their fingers, or tears, or the inability to look anyone in the eye because they are still carrying a burden of shame that is not theirs: but they don't know that yet.

Only recently have they had access to a professional counselor to help them process their anger, hurt, pain, and confusion. A few have vertical scars on their wrist: noticeable reminders of dark times and pain and anguish that most of us will never experience.

House9Foundation is Siope and Liu's repurposed 3-bedroom 1-bath house in a poor Tongan neighborhood.

When I arrived. I noticed immediately that the house is busting at the seams with kids, dogs, laughter, laundry, and food preparation activities.

This house is not big enough or equipped to handle the extra 3-5 girls that routinely live here along with their family.

Sometimes kids sleep on a woven mat, a thin foam mattress, the floor or on the couch. Our superheroes make sacrifices such as having their own boys sleep out in a shed.

Everything Siope and Liu have done so far has been self-funded using their small teaching salaries, old car, home, and time.

They run kids to school in shifts because their small car won't haul all of them and buses are unreliable and mostly non-existent in Tonga.

Because the weather is mild often the parwatchman" so the girls don't have to worry about any unwanted visitors.

It does not stop their personal nightmares, but it's a first small step.

We have been working with House9Foundation for nearly nine months. With the help of some donations, we were able to get mattresses for kids to sleep on. But the fact is, there are not enough bedrooms for this many kids.

We wanted to help, but it costs lots of money to build a house. So, I decided to give up my Pepsi and donate all the funds to buying lumber to make a modest addition to the house.

Really? I know! Give up my Pepsi? Okay, perhaps the Lord made it easier for me, as it turns out I can't find a Pepsi in Tonga and I do have some principles, so I won't drink Coke.

We consecrated my Pepsi money to serving the Lord and bought some lumber to start building two bedrooms for House9Foundation.

House9Foundation had a large, covered deck. Our plan was to start building some walls and hope and pray that it might inspire others to want to help and donate. So, we did just that.

Up went a few walls and soon neighbors and other people drove by and started asking what we were doing.

Angels started arriving, they looked like Tongans and other Senior Missionaries, but I am sure they were angels. Some brought food, some brought tools we could use, some just came and watched us work and told us stories and encouraged us.

Fortunately, a few brought money. The people in Tonga that ed to help throw a few starfish back into the ocean and give them another chance to live.

As the walls went up, you could see hope in the eves of the kids. They felt the collective love of Siope and Liu and a community that had not forgotten them.

Sometimes the suffering around us makes us want to be like the old man and give up trying because the needs are many and the resources so few.

But with my free labor, (after all, I am currently working for the Lord; sure, the pay isn't great, but the retirement plan is supposed to be pretty good), perhaps we could make a couple of bedrooms under the covered porch on the cheap.

The project started with prayer and hope. Now House9Foundation has two additional bedrooms, with sheetrock, primer, electricity, a few beds and mattresses, and doors.

We read about angels and miracles in the scriptures such as when God healed the sick and when an angel appeared to strengthen Jesus in Gethsemane.

With the faith of Siope and Liu, and the help of a few angels, and God's ability to multiply our efforts, young women are being healed and are finding meaning and purpose after a very rough start in life.

I don't know if you believe in miracles, but I do. There have been over 30 kids that have lived at House9Foundation: 90 percent have graduated, 90 percent participated in seminary, 50 percent have gone on missions, and 60 percent have gone on to college or other post high school training.

There are 15 that have been married. 80 percent have been married in the temple. These statistics may not prove a miracle, but to hear the laughter and see the smiles on the faces of these young women sure feels like one to me.

Siope and Liu, are throwing starfish back into the ocean one at a time and "making a difference to that one". And the question, "Lord, when did we see You a stranger and take You in?" has been answered and acted upon by ordinary people doing extraordinary things.

Look around on the beach near you, I am guessing there are some starfish that could use your help.

"If you love life, don't waste time, for time is what life is made up of."

The 2024 Monticello High School baseball team beat local rival Dove Creek 14-4 on Tuesday, April 9 for their first official win of the season. A win against Dolores the Buckaroos earned on March 26 doesn't count toward the standings since the Bears are technically fielding a JV team this season. Monticello is now 1-7 on the year, ranked 12th in the 2A RPI. They are gearing up for a couple tough 2A East Region matchups this week against local rivals. On Tuesday, April 16 they hosted the Grand County Red Devils in a game that was played after the San Juan Record print deadline. They'll visit the San Juan Broncos on Friday, April 19 with the first pitch set for 3 p.m. Members of the team include: (top row, left to right) Coach Nick Felix, Coach Ryan Young, Tyson Wheeler, Jackson Keyes, Mason Atwood, Zac Thayn, Cruise Shumway, Tristan Burtenshaw, Triston Felix, Coach Baylr Eldredge, Head Coach Josh Keyes. Bottom: Manager Hailey Murdock, Cache Young, Canyon Christensen, Kooper Nielson, Peyton Hatathley, Arturo Gutierrez, McKay Nielson, and Jaeden Camacho. Courtesy photo
